According to market opportunities, Students should be well-versed with real-time businesses. So they need strong exposure and events where they can improve their soft-skills apart from technical knowledge. To attain this a platform should be set where they deal with real-time business (may be through college daily routine activities which can be maintained by student bodies). A placement team where students will be working to interact with companies so that they have the idea of company expectations and will groom themselves accordingly. I recommend more student clubs (Placecom, cultural committee, Sponsorship, Sports com, CSR team), under the guidance of faculty to improve their administrative skills and add value to their resume. Every student being part of one club or other to be mandatory. IQ level of the students need to be improved where they were lacking in our test. Also, participation in pre-placement talk gives the company a good impression about college and students enthusiasm to enter that company

① Students have to understand the importance of practicing the real time scenarios instead of theory knowledge. ② Better to rely on the programming languages like C++ and python ^{Java} where you will get opportunity to understand the concepts very clear. Frankly to say i don't believe people who says that i code in python if they don't understand the concepts in C++ (or) Java. ③ Don't look for shortcuts to get the things done, try learning through difficulties.

When we ask real time examples they are unable to answer the same concepts.
